To Whom It May Concern:

I don't understand why this should even be an issue. With the billions and billions of miles put on today's roads, we should be looking for people's best interest when driving. With what XM has done, it might help avoid accidents and increase just general efficiency by just knowing where to go and not go. The trucking industry itself is probably helped also by just turning the switch and finding detours and better routes to avoid congestion. Why ban such a good thing? Besides, normal radio stations could never survive doing traffic and weather reports 24 hours a day, there's just not enough money in advertising revenue to generate a proper station in each of the markets that XM covers. Thank you, and please just think about the driver's concerns when making this decision.
